

HISTORY

It won't be incorrect or erroneous to state that KHO KHO was recognized in ancient times even earlier than the oldest mythological writings of the classics, "Mahabharata". It was played on chariots and competitors riding on chariots chased each other. It was called "Rathra" at that time. Kho Kho is an ancient game of undivided India, probably derived from the different strategy and tactics of "Kurukshetra" war in "Mahabharata". The chariot fight during the war and zig zag pathways followed by the retreating soldiers indicates the formation of Chain Play – Defense Skill in the game of Kho Kho. After that the same strategy was adopted by "Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj" at the time of war.

Maharashtra is considered as the origin of KHO KHO game in the 18th century but there is no concrete evidence to support the claim. By then the sport was played with the combination of hide & seek during the festival season itself. The people from rural parts of India loved the sport and were highly appreciated.

The very first systematic study of the game was started. A committee was constituted by Deccan Gymkhana Club to make the game more disciplined under the guidance and supervision of Lokmanya Bal Gangadhar Tilak and Maharaja Sayajirao Gaekwad III, Kingdom of Baroda. After consulting with the experts of different parts of the country, the committee suggested some changes in the rules & regulation to make this game faster and more interesting. Only three important rules were strictly followed at that time otherwise this game would have been an impossible one:

1. The "Kho" has to be given from behind.
2. The faces of the adjoining players to be in the opposite direction.
3. The Sitting Attacker was prohibited to run in between the seated Sitting Attackers.

The Deccan Gymkhana club of Pune, Maharashtra and the great Indian leader Sh.

Kashinath (Bhai) Nerurkar drafted the first ever rules and regulations which symbolized the metamorphosis of the game soon to follow. This initial stage marked the limitation of the playground and yet sadly lacked the poles demarking the central lane in the field. Instead, two less calibre players were positioned at the place and the Attacker had to run around them to return to the midfield.

The game with its fast pace fascinated the spectators. The Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Lord Willingdon also admired the merits and potentials of the game. The year 1923-24 saw the foundation of the Inter School Sports Competition and Kho Kho game was introduced in the schools to develop at the grass roots and consequently popularize the sport.

It's a first time in India; the rules of the game were published in the form of a book by Akhil Maharashtra Sharirik Shikshan Mandal (AMSSM). The AMSSM was established in 1928 to develop the Indian traditional sports.

1936

It was the golden opportunity for the game of Kho Kho when the exhibition of Kho Kho game (Men) was featured during Berlin Olympic Games in the main stadium by the Hanuman Wyayam Prasarak Mandal, a renowned Sports Institute from Amravati, Maharashtra. The game was appreciated by Fuhrer of Germany - Adolf Hitler but after his death, no advantage had been seen in future.

1938

The second edition of the Rule Book was published by Akhil Maharashtra Sharirik Shikshan Mandal.

Kho Kho moved one step forward when Akhil Maharashtra Sharirik Shikshan Mandal organized Inter Zonal Sports at Akola, Maharashtra which attracted tremendous response from the budding enthusiasts as well as organizers. The players were restricted to 9 players per team and sport was played without the poles. In the beginning of the match, players used to take 3 rounds of the Playfield from post to post (two less calibre players positioned) and then started the match.

The game was exhibited in Sweden and Denmark but it didn't leave any effect on the spectators (foreigner) because of improper follow up programs. After that, the poles were featured in the game. Also, the 3 rounds in the beginning of the game were reduced to one round from pole to pole and a couple of years later, even the one round was eliminated.

1955-56

After Independence, Indian games received good support from the public as well as the Government of India. The "Akhil Bhartiya Kho Kho Mandal / Amateur Kho-Kho Federation of India” was formed in the year 1955-56. Shri B. Gopala Reddy & Shri Kashinath (Bhai) Nerurkar were the founder members who had initiated to form the association of Kho Kho game.
